THIRTY-FIFTH LEGISLATURE

Bill 450

An Act to amend the Election Act, the Referendum Act and other legislative provisions

Introduction

Introduced by Mr Guy Chevrette
Minister responsible for Electoral and Parliamentary Reform

Québec Official Publisher

EXPLANATORY NOTES

This bill introduces new provisions into the Election Act to allow an elector or a group composed in the majority of electors to incur publicity expenses, without directly promoting or opposing any candidate or party, in order to publicize or obtain support for the views of the elector or group on a matter of public interest or to advocate abstention or the spoiling of ballots. The elector or group, designated in the Act by the expression "private intervenor", will be subject to a number of rules whereby, for instance, they will be required to obtain prior authorization, prohibited from spending more than $300 on publicity and from incurring expenses jointly with any other person and required to file a complete expense report.

The bill makes certain changes to the rules governing election expenses, thus providing, among other things, that expenses not exceeding $200 incurred to hold meetings will not be considered election expenses provided the meetings are not directly or indirectly organized on behalf of a candidate or party.

The bill introduces similar provisions in the Referendum Act and in the Act respecting elections and referendums in municipalities. However, as far as the Referendum Act is concerned, private intervenors will include both persons who, without directly promoting or opposing an option, wish to advocate abstention or the spoiling of ballots and persons who, not being able to join either national committee, wish to incur publicity expenses to promote an option. The maximum amount that may be spent on publicity by a private intervenor under the Referendum Act will be $1,000. The maximum amount relating to expenses for the holding of meetings remains $600.

The bill also amends the Election Act and the Health Insurance Act to facilitate the entry of the names of new electors on the permanent list of electors.

Various modifications are also made to the Election Act to facilitate its administration. For example, independent Members of the National Assembly will be required to obtain authorization to allow them to solicit and collect contributions. The Government will not be required to issue an order instituting a by-election if a vacancy occurs more than four years after the last general election. Other amendments concern the establishment and operation of boards of revisors, the revision of the list of electors entitled to vote outside Québec and the financing of election expenses. In addition, a new chapter is introduced concerning election posters and billboards as is a new division designed to make polling stations more accessible to the handicapped.

Regarding the polling itself, new provisions are proposed in relation to voter identification. The format of the ballot paper is modified as are the rules governing the manner of marking the ballot paper.

The Election Act is further amended to create new offences and to raise the amount of certain fines.

Finally, amendments consequential to the amendments in the Election Act and a number of other adjustments are made to the Referendum Act.
