NOTE TO READERS

In keeping with the Indigenous languages, the Commission has endeavoured to reconcile the terminology used with the spelling preferred by the Indigenous peoples themselves. As such, the names used to designate the First Nations communities are those used in the Indigenous languages. The same goes for the nations. The unchanging nature of certain Indigenous words (e.g., Inuit) has also been observed.

The term First Nations includes the Abénakis, Anishnabek (Algonquins), Atikamekw Nehirowisiw, Eeyou (Cree), Hurons-Wendat, Innus, Malécites, Mi'gmaq, Mohawks and Naskapis. The expression Indigenous peoples designates First Nations and Inuit collectively.

This publication was drafted following the work of the Public Inquiry Commission on relations between Indigenous Peoples and certain public services in Québec : listening, reconciliation and progress.

ORDER CONCERNING THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE COMMISSION D'ENQUÊTE SUR LES RELATIONS ENTRE
LES AUTOCHTONES ET CERTAINS SERVICES PUBLICS:
ÉCOUTE, RÉCONCILIATION ET PROGRÈS

Establishment of the Commission d'enquête sur les relations entre les Autochtones et certains services publics au Québec: écoute, réconciliation et progrès

---oooOooo---

WHEREAS the federal government announced on 3 August 2016 the establishment of the National Inquiry into Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls in Canada;

WHEREAS the federal inquiry commission's mandate includes examining and reporting on the systemic causes behind the violence that Indigenous women and girls experience, and their greater vulnerability to violence, by looking for patterns and underlying factors that explain why higher levels of violence occur;

WHEREAS recent events have revealed, among other things, the existence of possible discriminatory practices towards Aboriginals in the provision of public services in Québec;

WHEREAS indigenous women in Val-d'Or and elsewhere in Québec have reported misconduct on the part of certain police force members;

WHEREAS those allegations have given rise to investigations by the Service de police of Ville de Montréal, whose impartiality and integrity have been ascertained by an independent person, and it is now expedient to examine the structural causes leading to such situations;

WHEREAS a report entitled "La judiciarisation de l'itinérance à Val-d'Or" by the Observatoire sur les profilages makes observations that highlight problems calling for reflection on the relations between Aboriginals and the providers of certain public services in Québec;

WHEREAS, beyond the specific facts pertaining to individual cases, it is expedient to shed light more globally on the systemic issues that characterize the relations between Aboriginals and the providers of certain public services in Québec;

WHEREAS it is the Government's will to identify the underlying causes behind any form of violence, systemic discrimination or differential treatments that may exist in respect of Aboriginals in the provision of certain public services in Québec;

WHEREAS, under section 1 of the Act respecting public inquiry commissions (chapter C-37), whenever the Government deems it expedient to cause inquiry to be made into and concerning any matter connected with the good government of Québec, the conduct of any part of the public business, the administration of justice or any matter of importance relating to public health, or to the welfare of the population, it may, by a commission issued to that effect, appoint one or more commissioners by whom such inquiry shall be conducted;

WHEREAS it is expedient in the circumstances to order that an inquiry be made and that a commissioner be appointed to conduct it, for the remuneration set by the Government;

WHEREAS it is expedient that an inquiry commission be established to make an inquiry, to record the facts and to make recommendations as to the concrete and efficient remedial measures to be taken by the Gouvernement du Québec and by the Aboriginal authorities;

WHEREAS such an inquiry commission will allow, among others, Aboriginal women, Aboriginals and providers of public services, including police officers, to share their experience and concerns and to voice their opinions with respect to the solutions that could be implemented to improve the provision of public services to Aboriginals;

WHEREAS the commission will have to be attentive to the concerns expressed by all the intervening parties in order to favour reconciliation, thus fostering progress in the relations between Aboriginals and the Gouvernement du Québec;

WHEREAS the Government intends to implement a mechanism to assess and follow up on the recommendations made by the inquiry commission;

WHEREAS the Government, in cooperation with the indigenous communities, wishes to quickly find solutions that may be implemented to face the difficulties encountered without waiting for the end of the inquiry commission's work;

IT IS ORDERED, therefore, on the recommendation of the Premier:

THAT, in accordance with section 1 of the Act respecting public inquiry commissions (chapter C-37), the Commission d'enquête sur les relations entre les Autochtones et certains services publics au Québec be established;

THAT Mr. Jacques Viens, a retired judge of the Superior Court, be appointed as commissioner to conduct that inquiry as of 21 December 2016 and that he receive a fee of $1,200 per day;

THAT the Commission be given the mandate, taking into account the issues mentioned in the preamble, to investigate, ascertain the facts and make analyses with a view to making recommendations as to the concrete, effective and sustainable measures to be implemented by the Gouvernement du Québec and by the Aboriginal authorities to prevent or eliminate, regardless of their origin or cause, any form of violence or discriminatory practices or differential treatments in the provision of the following public services to the Aboriginals of Québec: police services, correctional services, justice services, health and social services and youth protection services;

THAT the Commission decide its internal rules and establish its priorities and any other rule it deems useful for its operation;

THAT the Commission hold hearings in Val-d'Or as well as in affected indigenous communities and in other regions of Québec, if it deems it necessary to carry out its mandate;

THAT the hearings of the Commission be public and that the Commission, when it deems it appropriate, conduct its work in camera or take any other measure to protect the identity of witnesses and personal information, both at the hearing and when communicating its report;

THAT, insofar as the Commission deems it appropriate and in keeping with procedural fairness, the Commission be able to conduct its work using informal processes with a view to allowing, among others, Aboriginal women, Aboriginals and police officers to express their experiences and concerns and to propose solutions so that better public services are provided to Aboriginals;

THAT the Commission have recourse to any expert useful for the carrying out of its work;

THAT the inquiry cover the last 15 years;

THAT the Commission not include any blame and not draw any conclusion or make any recommendation with respect to the civil, penal or criminal liability of persons or organizations;

THAT the Commission perform its functions in a way that does not impede any current or future investigation, in particular an investigation of a criminal, penal, ethical or disciplinary nature, and any current judicial proceedings or proceedings that could result from the Commission;

THAT the Commission be able to obtain information relevant to its work from the Commission responsible for the National Inquiry into Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls and that it be able to communicate to that commission the information it gathers in the course of its work, subject to information that is protected;

THAT the Commission have the budget necessary for covering the costs of its operations;

THAT the expenses related to the remuneration of the staff of the Commission and to the payment of professional fees be paid out of the general fund of the Consolidated Revenue Fund and that the other expenses be paid out of the budget of the Secretariat of the Conseil du trésor;

THAT the person appointed as commissioner under this Order in Council be reimbursed for the travel and accommodation expenses incurred in the performance of his duties in accordance with the Règles sur les frais de déplacement des présidents, vice-présidents et membres d'organismes gouvernementaux, made by the Government by Order in Council 2500-83 dated 30 November 1983;

THAT the Commission carry out its work and submit its report, including its findings, conclusions and recommendations, not later than 30 November 2018. The report must be presented in a format allowing its disclosure to the public, subject to the applicable laws;

THAT this Order in Council take effect from the date of its making.

I. MANDATE OF THE COMMISSION

1. By decree number 1095-2016 of December 21, 2016, the Government of Québec has created the Public Inquiry Commission on relations between Indigenous Peoples and certain public services in Québec: listening, reconciliation and progress (hereinafter the “Commission”), with the following mandate:

- a) To investigate, establish the facts and carry out analyses with a view to making recommendations for concrete, effective and sustainable measures to be put in place by the Government of Québec and indigenous officials in order to prevent or eliminate, regardless of nature or cause, any form of violence, discriminatory practices or differential treatment in the delivery of the following public services to Indigenous in Québec: police, correctional, legal, health and social services, as well as youth protection services.
- b) To hold hearings in Val-d’Or and in the indigenous communities affected, as well as in other parts of Québec, if deemed necessary in the performance of its mandate;

To perform its duties, the Commission could:

- c) When deemed necessary and in compliance with procedural fairness, carry out its work using informal processes with a view to allowing indigenous women, indigenous people, police officers and other stakeholders, among others, to express their experiences and concerns and offer solutions to improve the delivery of public services to Indigenous;
- d) obtain information that is relevant to the work of the Commission responsible for the National Inquiry into Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls and share any information collected as part of its work, subject to privileged information;

The scope of this mandate is subject to certain limitations. As such:

- e) The Commission's investigation will cover the past 15 years;
- f) The Commission shall not lay blame nor formulate any conclusion or recommendation regarding the civil, penal or criminal responsibility of people and organizations;
- g) The Commission will perform its duties in a way that does not impede any ongoing or future investigation, such as a criminal, penal, professional or disciplinary investigation, as well as legal proceedings that are either under way or may result from it;
- h) The Commission will execute its work and submit its report, including its observations, conclusions and recommendations, before November 30, 2018.

2. The Commissioner appointed under decree number 1095-2016 to conduct this investigation as of December 21, 2016, is the honourable Jacques Viens, a retired judge from the Québec Superior Court.

II. ADOPTION, MODIFICATION AND APPLICATION OF THE RULES

3. The Commissioner adopts the Procedural and Operational Rules that he may consider expedient for the proper conduct of the inquiry.

Procedural rules are effective from the moment they are posted on the Commission's website.

4. In the course of the Commission's mandate, the Commissioner can, if he deems it necessary, make changes to the Rules herein or waive compliance therewith to improve the inquiry process.

Changes are effective from the time they are posted on the Commission's website.

5. All witnesses, full and limited participants, as well as their lawyers, will be considered to have undertaken to observe these Rules. They can report any violation of these Rules to the Commissioner.

6. The Commissioner bases his decisions on the Rules herein and, in the event that no specific rules exist, in such a way that ensures the effectiveness of the inquiry process, compliance with the rights of the parties, witnesses and people involved, and in a spirit of procedural fairness.

7. The Commissioner is required to ensure the sound management of the inquiry and that it runs smoothly. He can, from his own initiative, take all the measures necessary to meet this goal.

8. The Commissioner can, at his sole discretion, exempt anyone from these Rules under conditions determined by him. He can change any deadline set out in these Rules on justified request.

III. INTERPRETATION AND DEFINITIONS

9. In the Rules, the masculine gender implies the feminine and the singular implies the plural.

10. Unless otherwise specified, the following terms refer to:

(a) Address of the Commission's website: www.cerp.gouv.qc.ca.

Email address: greffe@cerp.gouv.qc.ca

(b) Commission's counsel: A lawyer whose services have been retained by the Commission to assist with the Commission and ensure it runs smoothly. His main responsibility is to represent the public interest when investigating the facts, particularly ensuring that all questions pertaining to the Commission's mandate and to public interest are addressed to the Commissioner;

(c) Commission: Public Inquiry Commission on relations between Indigenous Peoples and certain public services in Québec: listening, reconciliation and progress.

(d) Document: Any medium holding information or data, including any paper or electronic medium, analog or digital audio or video tape or disk, picture, card, chart or microfiche;

(e) Registry of the tribunal: the offices of the Commission, at P.O. Box 547, Val d'Or, J9P 4P5;

(f) Limited participant: Person to whom the Commissioner has granted this standing;

(g) Fax number of the Commission: (819) 354-3132

(h) Full participant: Person to whom the Commissioner has granted this standing;

(i) Party: A full or limited participant as set out in these Rules;

(j) Person: Refers to an individual, group, organization, an association, an indigenous nation, a band council a public service or any other entity, including the government, a city or a municipality;

(k) Rules: These Procedural and Operational Rules.

IV. STANDING

11. Full participant:

(a) The Commissioner grants the full participant standing to anyone who has a significant, direct interest with respect to the subject of the inquiry and is likely to be affected by the Commission's report.

- (b) The Commissioner establishes the participation conditions for this person, the nature and the scope of the participation as well as the parts of the inquiry in which they may participate;
- (c) At any time, the Commissioner can, after giving the full participant the opportunity to speak, change their standing or the conditions of their participation, or withdraw the full participant standing;
- (d) The Commissioner can order several full participants with similar interests to be represented jointly and share in a single grant of standing.

12. Limited participant:

- (a) The Commissioner grants the limited participant standing to anyone who has a real interest with respect to the subject of the inquiry or who has special expertise that may contribute to the execution of the Commission's mandate;
- (b) The Commissioner establishes the participation conditions for this person, the nature and the scope of the participation as well as the parts of the inquiry in which they may participate;
- (c) At any time, the Commissioner can, after giving the limited participant the opportunity to speak, change their standing or the conditions of their participation, or withdraw the limited participant standing;
- (d) The Commissioner can order several limited participants with similar interests to be represented jointly and share in a single grant of standing.

13. Before granting standing, the Commissioner takes into consideration all applications sent to the Commission and ensures that the anticipated time and costs remain proportional to the nature and purpose of the mandate.

14. Anyone who would like to obtain full or limited participant standing shall make a written request to the Commission before the date established by the Commissioner or at any time deemed acceptable by the Commissioner thereafter, including:

- (a) Their name, address, telephone and fax numbers and email address;
- (b) The nature of their interest for the Commission's work;
- (c) The desired standing and the reasons for the request;
- (d) How they can contribute to the Commission's work;
- (e) The name and contact information of the lawyer representing them, as stipulated in paragraph a).

15. The application includes a sworn statement from the applicant, indicating that he has read these Rules and undertakes to comply with them.

16. People who wish to be granted standing will have the right to give presentations on the date fixed by the Commissioner or at any other time set subsequently.

17. Under the conditions established by the Commissioner when granting standing, the participation of a person with a participant standing shall include:

- (a) Access to the documents tabled as evidence by the Commissioner's prosecutors or the prosecutors of a participant before the Commission, subject to any order rendered under these Rules;

- (b) Reception of will-say summaries from witnesses to be heard by the Commission, under the conditions stated herein or orders rendered under these Rules;
- (c) A seat at the counsels' table during the parts of the inquiry for which the person has been granted full participant standing;
- (d) The opportunity to recommend that the Commission's prosecutors summon certain witnesses, cover certain aspects during testimonies or table certain documents, or request an order to summon a witness or demand that a document be submitted as evidence;
- (e) The right to raise objections and examine witnesses, within the limits of their interest and on the subjects relating to their participant standing;
- (f) The right to make final observations verbally and to present a written brief, within the limits of the conditions set out by the Commissioner under Rule 11 b).

18. Under the conditions established by the Commissioner when granting standing, the participation of a person with a limited participant standing shall include:

- (a) Access to the documents tabled as evidence by the Commissioner's prosecutors or those of a full participant before the Commission, subject to any order rendered under these Rules;
- (b) Reception of will-say summaries from witnesses to be heard by the Commission, within the limits of his interest and under the conditions stated herein or orders rendered under these Rules;
- (c) A seat at the counsels' table during the parts of the inquiry for which the person has been granted limited participant standing;
- (d) The opportunity to recommend that the Commission's prosecutors question a witness on certain specific points or, with the Commissioner's permission, to question the witness regarding specific points;
- (e) The right to make final verbal observations on aspects pertaining to their limited participant standing and, with the Commissioner's permission, to present a short written report on these aspects.

19. The Commission's prosecutors have the right to act before the Commission as well as on behalf of the Commission before the courts at all times.

20. Upon taking up the roles, counsels, investigators and other Commission staff members take the oath of confidentiality required by the Commissioner.

V. RIGHT TO COUNSEL AND REPRESENTATION BEFORE THE COMMISSION

21. All full and limited participants are entitled to counsel representation before the Commission.

22. Anyone summoned by the Commission as a witness has the right to be assisted by counsel. This lawyer shall not question the witness, but may formulate objections in relation to his or her fundamental rights.

23. Any person other than an individual is required to have counsel representation before the Commission.

24. Lawyers' fees are covered by the full or limited participants and witnesses with representation or assistance.

VI. APPLICATIONS AND MOTIONS

25. Unless exempted by the Commissioner, all applications must be submitted to the Commission in writing. It must be supported by a sworn statement alleging the facts that are not in the record of the Commission, along with a notice of presentation, submitted to the Commission's clerk in three copies, at least five (5) clear days before the scheduled presentation.

26. Applications that might affect the rights of one or several parties other than the applicant shall only be submitted to the Commission's clerk after these parties have been notified. The Commissioner shall then confirm when the motion will be heard and what conditions will apply in this respect.

27. Notification may be given by email, by fax or by bailiff. A bailiff or peace officer, on the other hand, presents subpoenas.

VII. PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS WITH WITNESSES

28. The counsels or investigation agents of the Commission can question anyone with information or documents related with the subject of the inquiry before the hearings.

29. In the event that the Commission's prosecutors decide that someone should be summoned as a witness following questioning, they shall draft a will-say summary and provide a copy for examination prior to testifying before the Commission.

30. Before a witness testifies, the Commission's counsels provide the parties' lawyers with a will-say summary, along with the documents they plan to submit as evidence as part of this testimony, subject to a written engagement on their part to keep them confidential and take the necessary measures to ensure this confidentiality, to destroy them after the hearings and to not use them for any other purpose whatsoever, in accordance with the undertaking in Appendix A of these Rules.

31. The lawyers may only share these documents and information with their respective clients and experts in compliance with the engagements made, as applicable, and only if these clients sign the same undertakings, in Appendix B of these Rules.

32. The engagements taken in accordance with rules 30 and 31 no longer apply to a document or information on the public record of the Commission.

33. The Commissioner can exempt a party of his lawyer, in whole or in part, of the engagement taken with regard to a document or to specific information, on request.

34. Unless decided otherwise by the Commissioner, will-say summaries, shall not be used to confront them during their examination, nor be entered into evidence at the hearings.

35. At their discretion, the Commission's counsels may require from consenting witnesses a sworn statement that may subsequently be entered into evidence in lieu of testimony.

VIII. SECURITY MEASURES

36. People visiting the Commission's premises shall comply with the prohibitions and security controls in place. They shall also comply with the instructions of the security officers/special officers in place.

IX. HEARINGS

37. The Commission sets the date, time and location of the hearings. Unless otherwise specified, hearings will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end at 4:30 p.m.

38. At the hearing's scheduled start time, those present in the hearing room will take their seats and will remain silent. The clerk announces the start of the hearing.

39. During hearings, the Commission's counsels and participant's lawyers are allowed to remain seated while questioning witnesses or addressing the Commissioner.

40. Witnesses remain seated when they testify.

41. Those attending the hearings must behave respectfully, remain quiet and abstain from showing any approval or disapproval. Cell phones and smart devices shall be turned off at all times.

42. Anything that may adversely affect the decorum and good order of the hearings is forbidden.

X. CLOSED PROCEEDINGS AND NON-DISCLOSURE, NON-PUBLICATION AND NON-DISTRIBUTION ORDERS

43. The Commission's hearings are public, unless the Commissioner orders closed proceedings.

44. Depending on the circumstances, the Commissioner determines the identity of the people authorized to attend the closed proceedings and, as applicable, the special conditions applicable to each of these people.

45. Moreover, the Commissioner can order the non-disclosure, non-publication or non-communication/distribution of a testimony, evidence, application or observation, or make any other order aiming to protect confidentiality.

46. Unless otherwise decided by the Commissioner, all closed proceedings are subject to an order of non-disclosure, non-publication and non-communication/distribution.

47. Any request for closed proceedings, non-disclosure, non-publication or non-distribution, or any other confidentiality order, shall be presented to the Commission in writing, or verbally during the hearings. The Commissioner shall then confirm when the motion will be heard and what conditions will apply in this respect.

48. Witnesses may request that the Commissioner adopt measures to protect their identity for serious reasons. Witnesses may, for instance, ask to testify in closed proceedings and request that any measure to protect the confidentiality of their testimony be applied. If the motion is approved, witnesses will get "confidential" treatment, including the use of non-identifiable initials instead of a name. Any reproduction of the witness's image, wherever he or she happens to be, or of his or her voice, in any form and at any time whatsoever, shall then be prohibited.

XI. EVIDENCE

49. The Commissioner may receive any evidence he deems relevant to his mandate, whether or not this evidence is admissible in a court of law. The rules of evidence are applied to promote its admissibility, subject, however, to its evidentiary value, its unnecessarily prejudicial impact, respect for fundamental rights and for the Commission's mandate.

50. Unless the Commissioner chooses otherwise, evidence is presented by the Commission's counsels.

51. The Commission's counsels have the latitude to refuse to summon a witness or to allow evidence to be presented.

52. In the event that the Commission's counsels refuse to summon a witness or to present evidence, a full participant may ask the Commissioner that the witness be summoned or that the evidence be presented. The request shall specify the witness's name and address, and include a summary of their testimony or a description of the desired evidence and its relevance. If the full participant also plans to enter documentary or material evidence into the Commission's record, he or she shall include a copy with the application or explains why this is not possible.

If the motion is granted, the Commission's counsels shall summon the witness or present the evidence.

53. Anyone can ask the Commission for permission to testify under the same conditions.

54. The Commission expects that any information or document relevant to its mandate be submitted by any person called to testify, even if the subpoena does not make reference to the information or to the document concerned.

55. Anyone who is aware of the existence of a document or of a relevant piece of evidence that has not yet been entered into evidence or submitted to the Commission's counsels, and for which disclosure is not prohibited by law, shall inform them of this.

56. Any party or witness who would like to raise a question of privilege with respect to information or documents he or she must provide shall inform the Commissioner in writing, as soon as possible, for a decision to be made.

The objection may also be expressed verbally at the hearing.

57. During the hearings, the Commission takes the witnesses' statements by stenography, stenotype, or mechanical or digital recording, all of which requires transcription.

58. In the transcripts, non-identifiable initials are used to replace the names of the witnesses for whom the Commissioner has granted confidential treatment. The same goes for the Commission's reports using the evidence provided by these witnesses.

XII. QUESTIONING

59. Witnesses are heard at the hearing, either in person or, on authorization from the Commissioner, by video conference.

Witnesses can express themselves in French, English or any indigenous language present in the province of Québec.

The Commission will take the necessary measures to retain the services of an interpreter as needed.

60. All witnesses must swear to tell the truth. The clerk ensures that the wording of the oath is read and understood by the witness.

61. The Commission's counsels interview the witness first. They can ask leading questions.

62. Participant's lawyer can then examine the witness, under the conditions and in the order established by the Commissioner and within the limits of each of their interest.

63. The Commissioner can circumscribe the topics of the examination and impose a time limit.

64. Following a full participant's testimony, the counsel representing him can examine him under the conditions set out by the Commissioner.

65. The Commissioner can, even of his own accord, limit or put an end to an examination if he feels it is irrelevant, repetitive, abusive or oppressive.

66. If a lawyer intends to use a document for examination, he or she must send a copy to the Commission's counsels at least three (3) clear days before the scheduled start of the examination of the witness.

The lawyer must also put the document at the disposal of the witness and all other parties no later than the day before his or her testimony.

The originals of the documents thus provided shall be disclosed to the Commission's counsel on request.

67. Witnesses may be re-examined by the Commission's prosecutors.

68. The Commissioner may ask witnesses any questions he deems relevant.

69. After a witness has taken the oath to tell the truth at the beginning of his or her deposition, no lawyer other than the Commission's counsel, unless otherwise authorized by the Commissioner, may speak about his or her testimony before he or she has completed his or her deposition.

70. Witnesses may be questioned more than once if necessary for the purposes of the Commission.

71. In the case of closed proceedings, the Commissioner shall decide on which lawyers may be present, the scope of the examination of a witness and to which extent the evidence thus gathered with the person they are representing or assisting may be discussed. All lawyers thus authorized to attend closed proceedings shall therefore make an oath to comply with all the conditions of their participation.

XIII. ENGAGEMENTS

72. On request from the Commissioner, witnesses must agree to provide the Commission's prosecutor with a document or information requested by the Commissioner, the Commission's prosecutor or a participant's lawyer, by the following day or by the established deadline.

73. Engagements are noted in a sequential order by the Commission's clerk and identified as E-1, E-2, E-3 and so on.

XIV. EXPERTISE

74. Full participants who wish to have an expert heard must send a written notice to the Commission's counsels and provide them and the parties with a copy of the written report of the testimony at least ten (10) days before the date agreed upon for the expert's testimony.

A copy of the expert's curriculum vitae and the sources he or she will be using as reference, as applicable, shall also be provided to the Commission's counsels and the parties at this time.

75. If the Commission's or a party's counsel objects to this expert, the Commissioner shall make a decision after giving each party the occasion to be heard.

76. The expertise presented by the Commission is subject to the same rules, mutatis mutandis, with the exception of any presentation made by the Commission as an introduction at the hearings, which is not subject to any formalities.

XV. DOCUMENT MANAGEMENT

77. Full participants shall provide the Commission's counsels with all documents, both in hard copy and digital form, they plan to submit as pieces of evidence or that they plan to refer to during the hearings, at least three (3) clear days before the day on which they will table a document or make reference to it.

78. Certain documents can, in whole or in part, be confidential, be subject to a non-disclosure, non-publication or non-communication/distribution order or be made available for all or just some of the full or limited participants' lawyers' eyes only.

79. Documentary evidence submitted before the Commission as well as the transcripts of testimonies are identified as P-1, P-2, P-3 and so on for public hearings, and as C-1, C-2, C-3 and so on for closed proceedings or for hearings for which the documents received a non-disclosure, non-publication, non-communication/distribution order or any other confidentiality order.

80. A copy of the "P" transcripts and "P" pieces of evidence will be posted on the Commission's website as soon as possible.

81. Only the Commissioner can authorize access to "C" transcripts and "C" pieces of evidence, under conditions determined by him.

XVI. MEDIA COVERAGE

82. The Commission will take the measures necessary to ensure public hearings are streamed live on its website and to make them available in real time for all broadcasters.

Hearings will also be available for later streaming on the Commission's website.

83. Cameras and microphones will be set up at pre-determined locations in the hearing room.

Only fixed cameras with a lighting system set up by the Commission shall be allowed in the hearing room.

84. Unless the Commissioner gives special authorization otherwise, press briefings and interviews are to be held outside the hearing room, in an area designated by the Commission, and never in the hearing room or elsewhere.

85. The Commissioner can give authorization for a photographer to take pictures in the hearing room before the work begins, at times and under conditions determined by him.

The pictures shall, however, be made available to other media.

86. No recording, rebroadcasting or photography form or method other than those set out in the Rules are allowed in the hearing room without the express authorization from the Commissioner.

87. Media representatives are required to comply with the Commissioner's instructions.

88. Each time the Commission holds closed proceedings or expresses an order of non-disclosure, non-publication, non-communication/distribution or any confidentiality order, the media must take the necessary measures to ensure visual or audio recording devices are off and that the orders are respected for their entire duration.

89. If allowed, broadcasts covering the deposition of a witness benefiting from confidential treatment shall not hold any information likely to reveal his or her identity.

XVII. RESEARCH

90. In addition to the public hearings, the Commission can, at its sole discretion and at any time, make use of various research methods with respect to questions pertaining to its mandate.

91. It can solicit the presentation of briefs in this respect. Briefs received will be posted on the Commission's website.

XVII. FORMS

92. The forms reproduced in Appendices A, B and C varied to suit the cases in question, are meant to be good, valid and sufficient in the circumstances for which they are respectively provided.

APPENDIX 6

INNOVATIVE PRACTICES

The Commission has documented certain initiatives that are relevant to the services covered by its mandate and that could be considered inspiring, innovative or promising. This list was compiled with the help of Commission experts and their teams¹⁴. It is based on the initiatives presented at the hearings and those documented by external sources in Québec, across Canada and abroad. Although the impacts and outcomes of these initiatives have not necessarily been assessed in every case, this Appendix provides information on certain projects and programs that diverge from standard institutional practices. For ease of understanding, these initiatives are divided into two categories: 1) health, social services and youth protection, and 2) police, justice and correctional services.

Health, social services and youth protection

The Minowé Clinic in Val-d'Or

Services covered: Health and social services

Description

The Minowé ("well-being" in Anishnabe) Clinic was founded in 2011 in Val-d'Or through a partnership between the Val-d'Or Native Friendship Centre (VDNFC), the Centre de santé et de services sociaux and the Centre jeunesse de l'Abitibi-Témiscamingue. The clinic complements the VDNFC's front-line services in childhood development, family health, birth and postnatal care. The team includes three partner-funded positions (coordinator, nurse and social worker) who provide support to families and parents with a particular focus on youth protection. In 2013, two doctors visited the clinic once a month, enhancing existing services. Once federal funding ran out, these services ceased. Minowé resumed its activities in 2017 under a new "strategy 2.0." The new approach looked beyond the clinic itself and sought to introduce cultural safeguards into the health and social services continuum.

Impact

The Health Council of Canada, which has assessed a number of models across Canada, singled out Minowé as one of the most promising cultural safety initiatives in the country. Looking at the impact of social workers specifically, the youth centre found that between 2011 and 2015, the number of reports and offences on RCM territory in urban areas was reduced by 40.0%.

The Acokan clinic in La Tuque

Services covered: Health and social services

Description

In 2015, the Centre d'amitié autochtone de La Tuque (CAALT) opened the Acokan clinic (named for the Atikamekw Nehirowisiw word for bridge), in collaboration with the Centre de santé et services sociaux du Haut-Saint-Maurice (CSSSHSM). It serves as a bridge between the local services network and the Indigenous peoples of Haut-Saint-Maurice and is aimed at improving the health of the urban Indigenous population and facilitating access to health care and social services. The clinic takes a culturally safe approach to patient admission, assessment, orientation, chronic illness management, routine health care, and public health initiatives. It also provides a link to home care services, the family medicine group and operating rooms. It acknowledges the important role played by Indigenous peoples as key players in their own health, focusing on values such as respect, openness to others, empathy, otherness and diversity. The clinic takes a holistic approach that includes all aspects of health care—physical, mental, emotional and spiritual. CAALT and CSSSHSM share the responsibilities for the Acokan clinic's design, development, funding and orientations. For example, CAALT is responsible for the coordinator's salary, while the CSSSHSM remunerates the nurse.

Impact

An internal satisfaction survey of clinic users indicates a high level of client satisfaction.

The healing program on Chisasibi ancestral territory

Services covered: Health, social services and justice

Description

The Chisasibi health representative, Larry House, organized two conferences on health and social services and two round tables on Eeyou (Cree) healing. These discussions led to the creation of a healing program on the territory in 2012, which has been integrated into the area's health services, social services and justice system. Open to all members of the community, it focuses primarily on young men referred by the Chisasibi justice committee. The program seeks to heal young people by connecting them to their Indigenous culture, and to confront suffering and self-destructive behaviour using land-based healing and cultural traditions. Participants spend two to three weeks in a hunting camp 500 km from Chisasibi where they learn skills and values derived from territory (Indoh-hoh) traditions that promote personal accountability and relationship harmony. The program includes presentations and discussions on the community's historical and current context, as well as one-on-one counselling with an elder and solitary forest activities. The program's goal is to improve participants' mental health so they can actively participate in their family and community life, and assist in the collective development of the Eeyou (Cree) nation.

Impact

Since 2012, the healing program has held eight group journeys. It has become a formal institution and has served as a model for other Eeyou (Cree) communities. Participants have reported a number of benefits: the honing of strengths and increased self-confidence, accountability for their own lives and health, reduced stress levels, improved physical, emotional, mental and spiritual balance, a better understanding of Eeyou (Cree) culture and increased happiness. A survey of fifteen young people aged 16 to 34 revealed that not only had their own wellness improved, their family's well-being had also increased thanks to a strengthening of family relations and reduced violence.

The Usseniu and Mamuitun projects at Nutashkuan

Services covered: Health and social services

Description

The intergenerational and mixed community therapy program, Usseniu ("new life" in Innu) ran from 1999 to 2001, offering 10-day forest retreats on ancestral land for the Nutashkuan community. A second project, entitled Mamuitun ("to unite" in Innu), was active from 2003 to 2010. The programs combined western therapeutic approaches with traditional healing methods. The projects had three objectives: 1) To explore in-depth the wounds associated with the residential school system and to become aware of the harm it inflicted both directly and indirectly; 2) To provide relief through discussions and through the sharing of emotions and feelings, and 3) To reclaim a sense of empowerment with an eye to adopting new, healthy lifestyle practices, thus ending the intergenerational transmission of trauma.

Impact

More than 200 people participated in the program between 1999 and 2005. Some of the positive community impacts include a major reduction in emergency responses to bodily injuries and anxiety related to domestic violence (from 110 in 1999 to 15 in 2002) and a reduction in the number of reports to youth protection services. Participants were able to repair the intergenerational bonds that had been shattered by the residential school system. Elders who often begrudged younger people for their more modern way of life became more open and able to recognize the suffering of others. Young people, in turn, developed a greater appreciation for elders and became more open to receive their teachings.

The Kahnawá:ke School Diabetes Prevention Project

Services covered: Health and social services

Description

Following seven years of discussions and funding requests, the Kahnawá:ke School Diabetes Prevention Project (KSDPP) was launched in 1994. Aimed at preventing type 2 diabetes in young people, the project had two objectives: a long-term reduction in the occurrence of type 2 diabetes, and a short-term reduction in the prevalence of obesity, high-fat and high-calorie diets and physical inactivity in Kahnawá:ke children aged 6 to 12. This initiative adheres to the Indigenous seventh generation principle, which refers to the obligation of community members to consider their impact on future generations. Among other components, the project includes a health education program, health guide, and community activities that promote the adoption of a healthy lifestyle. The entire Kahnawá:ke community took ownership of this project by getting involved at the pilot stage. The program runs a number of school-based interventions and initiatives that promote healthy lifestyle habits, such as the annual Sadie's Walk for the prevention of type 2 diabetes, which celebrated its 23rd year in 2019. The KSDPP Center for Research and Training in Diabetes Prevention was also created to provide grants for type 2 diabetes prevention research. Furthermore, more than 50 participatory research studies have been published, along with a code of research ethics in an Indigenous context, and a community advisory committee has been set up.

Impact

Over a period of three years, a total of 63 community interventions took place to promote the adoption of healthy lifestyles. Between 1994 and 1998, researchers noted a reduction in the frequency of high-fat food consumption and a lower prevalence of type 2 diabetes in Kahnawá:ke.

The Kuujjuaq community greenhouse project

Services covered: Health and social services

Description

The population of Nunavik faces difficulties accessing high-quality food both physically and economically so the arctic village of Kuujjuaq implemented a number of initiatives to combat the region's food insecurity crisis. The Kuujjuaq community greenhouse project was made possible through a partnership with Université Laval, Le Conseil québécois de l'horticulture, the village of Kuujjuaq, the Kativik Regional Government, the Ungava housing centre and a team of volunteers in Kuujjuaq. The two greenhouses are divided into 48 plots, which are allocated to participating individuals and families in a yearly draw. Each greenhouse can produce up to 300 kg of food. The project includes composting and horticultural therapy for persons living with mental illness, in addition to school programs and volunteer gardening initiatives to provide food to seniors.

Impact

The greenhouses produce fresh vegetables from June to September for more than 40 individuals and families. In 2012, it was identified by Inuit Tuttarvingat (the Inuit section of the National Aboriginal Health Organization) as an exemplary response to food insecurity. The Kuujjuaq community greenhouse was praised by certain authors for its compatibility with Inuit cultural norms and for responding to local needs.

Unaaq Men's Association of Inukjuak

Services covered: health and social services

Description

In 2001, in the wake of three suicides over just a few months in the community of Inukjuak, the Unaaq ("harpoon" in Inuktitut) Association was founded to provide support to young men, their families and their community, using an intergenerational approach that connects young men with elder mentors. Elders guide young men in hunting and fishing, and in building kayaks, igloos and qamutiks (snowmobile sleds). The Association holds igloo-building competitions and provides training in first aid, navigation, tourism, traditional tool-making, wilderness survival, emergency shelters, and the making of wooden toys and theatrical props. It also organizes soapstone collecting activities for sculptors and runs a small engine repair shop. The Association seeks to end isolation and displacement by strengthening cultural identity and promoting an appreciation for traditional roles.

The Wasueg project in Listuguj

Services covered: Health and social services

Description

The Haven House Women's Shelter for victims of domestic violence established the Wasueg ("flower" in Mi'gmaq) Project to help combat the domestic violence problem in the community. The project's main goal is to engage with people and resources in Listuguj in an open, safe and direct dialogue on violence against women and girls through focus groups and community activities. Wasueg aims to 1) Explore the scope of the problem in the community, 2) Identify gaps in service and program delivery and 3) Identify best practises that will serve as a guide in the development of safety plans and programs to address violence against women and girls in Listuguj. The project is also working to produce recommendations for community leaders and local administrators, and seeks the engagement of men and boys as well. In its report on Phase 1, the Wasueg project team notes that culture plays a critical role in solving the domestic violence issue and in healing intergenerational trauma in Listuguj. Phase 2 of Wasueg will refocus the dialogue on the Mi'gmaq culture by holding a cultural retreat for youth and a second one for elders entitled "Identifying Our Culture." Phase 2 will also see the development of a quantitative tool to measure awareness or knowledge of domestic violence, safety strategies and cultural practices for better relationships. The project has also identified the need for a community healing space for men in abusive relationships, whether they are abusers or victims.

Impact

In April 2016, Haven House released the following results of Phase 1: In addition to holding 13 focus groups with 105 participants, the project organized meetings with elders, band council members, employees of community groups (such as nurses), non-Indigenous community members in relationships with Mi'gmaq members, and high school students.

Missinak Community House

Services covered: Health and social services

Description

Missinak began its activities in 2010 in the Charlesbourg borough of Québec City, following a field study on the needs of Indigenous women in Matimekush-Lac John, Mashteuatsh, Pessamit and in the urban areas of Val-d'Or, Montréal and Québec City. Melding the conscientization methods of Paulo Freire with a holistic approach based on Indigenous spirituality, Missinak seeks to provide a model environment for all Indigenous women. The house includes nine rooms that can house up to 16 women and their young children, providing respite, protection, rejuvenation and healing. In addition to housing and healing, Missinak offers a variety of other services and activities. These include medical referrals and support, help with finding housing, an early childhood development program for Indigenous families in urban and northern communities (AHSUNC), Missinakuss (day care, community kitchen, various outings), parenting education initiatives (nutrition, health, social support, language/culture) and craft activities. The MAMUK multi-service centre offers a range of sports and healthy lifestyle activities, employment services, homework assistance and support for parents and students.

Impact

By way of illustration, in 2012 Missinak welcomed 50 Indigenous women and 49 children from various regions and communities, including Québec City.

The Wigobisan program at Lac-Simon

Services covered: Health, social services, justice

Description

The Wigobisan program ("a rainbow over the community" in Anishnabe), which ran from 1999 to 2004, was designed to promote a community and clinical approach to addressing sexual abuse experienced by young people from the Lac-Simon community. The result of a collaboration between the Lac-Simon community and Minokin social services, the program was financed by Indigenous and Northern Affairs Canada. Rooted in a perspective of community healing that recognizes the complexity of intergenerational trauma from Indigenous residential schools and relational dysfunction, it offered specialized services for the problem of child sexual abuse by working with the entire community in the long term. Community and clinical interventions, such as psychosocial support for children and families, were deployed in the community, in addition to prevention, community awareness and professional development activities for those who offered the services. The objective was to raise awareness and work with children from age three to adulthood. The Mistodan component was specifically for young people who committed sexual assault. It was based on mental health interventions in cooperation with the legal system. As such, culturally sensitive services were provided, because they were developed within the community. However, Wigobisan's trajectory was suddenly interrupted when the federal government withdrew its financing in 2002. Services were maintained for two years by the Conseil de la nation anishnabe du Lac-Simon health budget. Then the team managed to obtain partial, temporary funding from the Aboriginal Healing Foundation. When the federal government did not renew the foundation's funding, Wigobisan had to end most of its activities in 2004.

Impact

In its social services needs analysis in three Indigenous communities in Abitibi-Témiscamingue in 2006, the Laboratoire de recherche pour le soutien des Communitys (LARESCO) team referred to Wigobisan as a pioneer in interventions related to child sexual abuse. In under four years, Wigobisan supported 120 children through therapy, group and awareness-raising activities in the community. During the years Wigobisan was in operation, the community saw a drop in youth protection reports and placements. Furthermore, the number of suicides dropped significantly and even dropped to zero during Wigobisan activities.

Kijaté social housing in Val-d'Or

Services covered: Health, social services

Description

The Val-d'Or Native Friendship Centre came up with a social housing project for Indigenous families in Val-d'Or in 2009. This project is a first in Québec. It was financed in part by the governments of Canada and Québec, as well as the Ville de Val-d'Or, in addition to other contributions. In March 2018, some 23 families moved to Kijaté ("filled with sun" in Anishnabe). Low-income families are prioritized, and means are in place to support them in improving their conditions. The project takes into account the contexts and challenges of the urban Indigenous population and reflects the importance of the community, identity and cultural mobilization and reinforcing the autonomy and political participation of Indigenous peoples. The building, located in the city, can accommodate large families and contains common spaces such as a collective kitchen, a room for community activities and a meeting room for social workers. Furthermore, Kijaté is an inspiration for similar initiatives, such as the Native Montreal social housing project.

Charles J. Andrew healing program in Labrador

Services covered: Health, social services, youth protection

Description

In response to solvent abuse by young people, the Charles J. Andrew Youth Treatment Centre opened its doors in the Innu community of Natuashish in Labrador in 2000. Accredited by Health Canada since 2002, it is a residential healing centre with ten beds. It is mainly for young Innu, Inuit and other members of First Nations of Canada. The centre offers programs aimed at empowerment through holistic treatments that reinforce and renew Indigenous culture, practices, beliefs and values in terms of respect, trust, sharing, acceptance and cooperation. Initially only for young people, the centre expanded its range of services in 2013 by offering its first program for families, which has two components. The first clinical component focused on the impact of intergenerational trauma, sexual, physical and emotional abuse, developing healthy parenting skills, as well as alcohol and substance abuse, including its repercussions on the family. This program gives parents the opportunity to work to regain custody of their children in care. The second component in the territory, also called Nutshimit, is based on Indigenous culture as a healing factor that makes it possible to connect the spiritual, family and community.

Impact

Since it opened, the Charles J. Andrew Youth Treatment Centre has treated over 300 Innu, Inuit and other members of First Nations. Parents who completed a program at the centre had custody restored. A drop in crime in the community was noted, as was a drop in the number of suicides.

Indigenous doulas

Services covered: Health, social services

Description

Indigenous women trained to be doulas (birth coaches) offer mothers emotional, physical and spiritual support during pregnancy, birth and the post-partum period. They honour traditional practices and beliefs, making it possible to break down cultural barriers and language with medical personnel by creating a safe space. In British Columbia, the Tripartite Aboriginal Doula Initiative is a pilot project that has offered culturally adapted training for Indigenous women to become doulas since 2008. Through a partnership between the Association des centres d'amitiés autochtones and the First Nations Health Authority, the Aboriginal Doula Support Program finances doula services for all Indigenous families who submit a request. Finally, the network of Indigenous doulas from Vancouver called ekw'i7tl offers this service in the city. In Winnipeg, the Wijiji'idiwag Ikewewag – Manitoba Indigenous Doula Initiative is a pilot project created in 2016 in a collaboration between Nanaandawewigamig (First Nations Health and Social Secretariat of Manitoba), the University of Winnipeg and the University of Manitoba to train Indigenous doulas.

The Elders Mentoring Program in Alberta

Services covered: Health, social services

Description

The Elders Mentoring Program was created in 2015 in Wetaskiwin, Alberta to support pregnant women and future fathers in the community following consultations with the four First Nations of the Maskwacis community, located south of Edmonton. It is the result of a partnership between the community and the University of Alberta and is financed by Alberta Innovates Health Solutions. The goal of the initiative is to create a safe space for pregnant Indigenous women in the Wetaskiwin clinic waiting room. While they wait for their appointment with a health care professional, Eeyou (Cree) women elders offer them cultural, emotional and spiritual support. The support and presence of elders help break down the solitude of mothers-to-be and restore sharing traditions and knowledge about pregnancy. Future mothers reconnect with Indigenous traditions and ceremonies, like, for example, the use of the tikinagan, a baby carrier that reproduces the rocking effect of the womb.

The Mamisarvik Healing Centre in Ottawa

Services covered: Health, social services, correctional services

Description

The Mamisarvik Healing Centre ("a place to heal" in Inuktitut) for treating trauma and addiction is one of the only two Inuit initiatives that target these problems in Canada, along with Isuarsivik in Kuujjuaq. It is administered by Tungasuvvingat Inuit, a non-profit organization that provides services for Inuit in Ottawa. The centre treats addiction by addressing structural violence and responding to it through healing approaches that take into account the personal, family and collective histories of clients, which includes colonization and cultural oppression. The residential program initially ran for eight weeks and could treat 12 people at a time. It offered pre-treatment evaluation and weekly post-treatment follow-up for up to two and a half years. In 2010, Mamisarvik became the only service provider for Correctional Service of Canada for Inuit on probation who require treatment for dependency and trauma. Having lost a large portion of its financing in 2013 with the elimination of the Aboriginal Healing Foundation, the proportion of clients from Nunavut or correctional services increased, because their stays are paid for by the governments of Nunavut or Canada. To maintain services for the Inuit population in Ottawa, the centre now offers the program on an outpatient basis. Finally, since 2018, the centre has alternated between treatment cycles solely for women or men, in addition to added flexibility in the duration of treatments based on individual needs.

Impact

In 2015, over 720 Inuit participated in the treatment program, which has a completion rate of 80.0%. Up to 85.0% of Mamisarvik clients show symptoms of post-traumatic stress, which were significantly reduced or had disappeared by the end of the program. The suicide rate among people who completed the program dropped to 0.04%.

The Kwunatsustal program in Vancouver

Services covered: Health and social services

Description

Since 1996, a special treatment program for trauma (Kwunatsustal) is offered by the Tsow-Tun Le Lum Society in Vancouver. It accepts Indigenous men and women who have not consumed psychoactive substances for at least six months. In this way, the program is often the next step after the Thuy-Namut Substance Abuse Treatment Program, for which the person has to have abstained for the previous two weeks only. To be admitted to the centre, clients have to be referred by a professional, in addition to having follow-up before and after the program. They must show determination to tackle unresolved problems related to physical, emotional, sexual, mental and psychological abuse resulting from their experience of residential schools and intergenerational repercussions. The program lasts five weeks and serves ten to twelve clients at a time. The methods used to begin healing come from both Indigenous and non-Indigenous traditions.

Impact

A 2006 report from the Aboriginal Healing Foundation reveals that over 70.0% of participants surveyed said that the program helps them find their strengths and move beyond their trauma, making a difference in their life, in addition to preparing them to deal with possible future trauma, either fully or very well.

The Wabano Centre in Ottawa

Services covered: Health, social services

Description

The Wabano Centre opened its doors in Ottawa in 1998 and has grown to have 90 employees and over 400 volunteers. The health model of the Wabano Centre in Ottawa is recognized for its unique approach that takes into account physical, mental and spiritual health by offering the services of a complete medical clinic, a mental health clinic, cultural programs, community engagement, food (community kitchens, food baskets), revenue (social entrepreneurship) and support services relating to homelessness (mobile intervention team) and addiction. The Wabano care model is based on the respect and promotion of Indigenous cultures to create a sense of belonging for all clients. All programs are rooted in Indigenous knowledge and teaching. The services offered cover all life stages, from birth to old age.

Impact

Every year, Wabano offers services to over 15,000 people, and the number of people served is increasing every year.

The Children Who Witness Violence Program in Ontario

Services covered: Health, social services, youth protection

Description

Offered at Indigenous Friendship Centres across Ontario, the Children Who Witness Violence (CWWV) Program promotes the healing and positive development of children by integrating a cultural framework to the program. Services offered include cultural activities for children and their families, encounters with elders, traditional teaching and ceremonies. The objectives of the program are to attenuate repercussions on children who witness violence, to reduce the number of children taken into care by youth protection services and to offer Indigenous children tools for positive development to help them make good choices as they grow up.

Impact

Evidence shows that more families adopt traditional parenting skills after participating in the program. The academic performance of children improves and their adverse behaviour, both at home and at school, diminishes. Improved self-esteem, leadership skills, confidence and respect have been observed among children.

The PAX program in Manitoba

Services covered: Health, social services

Description

PAX is a mental health promotion strategy for children in grade one in Manitoba. Around 40.0% of children who participate in this program are Indigenous. The objective is to teach children to gain control of their lives and collaborate in order to learn how to effectively control themselves and their environment.

Impact

The PAX evaluation concluded that, in the long term, the program can reduce tobacco use and alcohol and drug consumption, violent crimes, suicidal thoughts and suicide attempts. PAX also promotes academic success in high school, post-secondary studies and participation in the job market. The initial results of PAX in Manitoba (including with First Nations) reveal that it has "positive effects in preventing early emotional, behavioural, hyperactivity, and peer relationship problems, and promoting early pro-social behaviour."

Source: Aboriginal Children in Care -- Report to Canada's Premiers (July 2015), document P-174 (Commission), p. 18.

The Healthy Child Manitoba program

Services covered: Health, social services, youth protection

Description

This program is designed for low-income pregnant women, particularly Indigenous women and mothers with children aged one or younger. Its objectives are to promote a healthy pregnancy for future mothers, in addition to promoting healthy early childhood development and a bond between mother and child. The main services offered are community support with programming focused on Indigenous culture and an income supplement as part of the Manitoba Prenatal Benefit program.

Positive impact

In 2010, an independent evaluation concluded that the program "prevented low birth weight and preterm births, and increased breastfeeding, which may reduce the risk of child abuse and lower rates of child welfare involvement."

The SAVA tool

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

The Soutien et d'accompagnement à la vie adulte des jeunes autochtones (SAVA) tool [support and coaching tool for Indigenous youth's transition to adulthood] was developed to facilitate support for Indigenous youth aged 16 to 24 as they transition to adulthood. Available in French and English since 2012, it was developed through a participatory, cross-disciplinary process in which several stakeholders from the Pikogan, Kitcisakik and Lac-Simon communities worked with the CISSS de l'Abitibi-Témiscamingue. The tool is not intended to evaluate young people, but rather to put together a picture of their situation and needs in various areas of life, in order to coach them through the phases of their transition to adulthood. The young person's perspective is taken into consideration, and coaching and support needs are identified and met. The tool includes seven areas: 1) identification and general information about the youth; 2) daily life and living environment (basic needs, health, lodging, etc.); 3) economic situation and budget management (income sources, financial commitments, benefits, etc.); 4) the youth's resources, social and support networks; 5) plans (school, work, recreation, etc.); 6) identity as a young person and an Indigenous person (relationship to self, culture and community, etc.); and 7) path to adult life (concerns, obstacles to self-fulfillment, perception of the future, etc.).

Family and significant person councils

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

Family councils and significant person councils are examples of approaches that aim to reconcile Youth Protection Act requirements with the Indigenous values of respect, listening, equality, mutual assistance, and involvement of the extended family and community. The Centre intégré de santé et des services sociaux de l'Outaouais has introduced significant person councils, particularly for the Barriere Lake and Kitigan Zibi communities. Such councils are intended to enable parents, with the support of workers, to bring people who are important to the child to a meeting to talk and establish what support they can provide when the child is at risk of being removed from the home, or has recently been removed. The initiative has been adapted to First Nations cultures by the inclusion of symbols, practices and objects such as traditional herbal medicines, the medicine wheel, talking stick, smudging shell, traditional herbs, and the eagle feather to promote honesty and strength. Council participants set the ground rules and are left with the child and parents (without the workers) to talk, find solutions, and then make proposals to the workers. Another council mandate is to identify the person or people who will be assessed to take the child in if the child has to be removed from home. The Centre intégré de santé et de services sociaux de l'Abitibi-Témiscamingue has also incorporated the family council into its process. The broader community is mobilized to look at the possibility of bringing the child back to the community as soon as a risk of instability or discontinuity in the child's family situation is identified, or for a short-term placement. Among the Atikamekw Nehiowisiw, family councils are called for all situations in which the director of social protection has decided to intervene under the Système d'intervention d'autorité atikamekw (SIAA). The family council is defined as an Atikamekw Nehiowisiw entity made up of a group of people who are directly concerned in a child's or youth's situation, or are able to help him or her.

My Family, My Community program

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

In Abitibi-Témiscamingue, the CISSS decided to implement the My Family, My Community (MFMC) program in 2014. Between 2012 and 2015, two youth centres, Batshaw and Montérégie, ran pilot projects for the program. The goal of the MFMC program is to mobilize the community and act as an ally in protecting the community's children using innovative strategies that leverage its resources. This program is not used for all Indigenous families subject to the YPA, only for situations in which the child is at risk of placement or displacement, or when the child has already been placed and a return home is being planned. At that time, the extended family or other community participants meet to find a solution that will allow the child to stay with his or her parents or a family member (aunts, grandparents, etc.) and avail of protective measures. Four strategies are deployed: 1) development of a partnership with the community; 2) recruitment of foster families; 3) team decision-making and 4) support for proximity foster families and self-assessment. The program's myriad objectives include decreasing the use of placement, optimizing the identification of alternatives to placement, keeping the child within the community, avoiding the separation of siblings when placement is required, and promoting active participation by parents, the community and organizations in making decisions and finding solutions. As of April 2018, the MFMC program was operational in the communities of Lac-Simon, Kitcisakik, and the communities of Timiskaming First Nation and Kebaowek had recently adopted the project. Talks were underway with the Pikogan and Long Point communities.

Impact

According to a 2015 research report, the program's outcomes are positive. In particular, it promotes a better understanding of the parents' situation and family dynamics, including a shared vision, as well as providing a greater variety and more potential solutions for the child. The program has benefited 172 children in Indigenous communities since 2013. Of these, 96.0% have been able to stay in their home communities, either with their parents or an important family member.

Mamouwechitutaau program

Services covered: Health, social services, youth protection

Description

The Mamouwechitutaau program ("Let's all help each other" in Eeyou [Cree]) emerged from a collaboration between the Boscoville organization and the Cree Board of Health and Social Services of James Bay's Youth Healing Services; it involves developing new intervention practices, and new management and administration tools, as well as a psychoeducational model that is based on Eeyou (Cree) cultural values and learning modes. With a view to enhancing the quality of youth rehabilitation services offered in Eeyou (Cree) Indigenous communities in James Bay, the line of services developed combines clinical practices that are based on notions of complex trauma (trauma-informed care) with Indigenous healing practices. The aim is to preserve cultural identity, acquire social competencies, and pass along the historical and cultural knowledge specific to users' contexts. An agreement has been concluded with Concordia University regarding certification of a training program based on this new knowledge.

The Système d'intervention d'autorité atikamekw

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

The Système d'intervention d'autorité atikamekw (SIAA) is a youth protection regime that works differently from Québec's general regime. An agreement signed January 29, 2018, by the Conseil de la Nation Atikamekw and the Ministère de la Santé et des Services sociaux under article 37.5 of the Youth Protection Act stipulates the responsibilities assumed by Atikamekw Nehirowisiw entities for youth protection, guardianship, adoption and measures covering young offenders. The SIAA is intended to promote supervision of children whose safety or development is compromised by family or community members, and thus decrease placement of these children with non-Indigenous families. The SIAA favours participation by the immediate and extended family, as well as other community members. The SIAA also promotes greater participation by Atikamekw Nehirowisiw communities in organizing and providing youth protection services, and enables better adaptation of services to the values, culture and lifestyles of Atikamekw children and their families. After being alerted (a report is received), an assessment is carried out to determine whether the family needs services, or whether the child truly requires protection. An assessment and decision process is initiated to establish whether the child's development is in danger. If so, a family council, council of elders, or helping circle may be organized; each one has a well-defined role and make-up. The situation can be brought before the court at any stage on various grounds.

Impact

By March 31, 2017, 107 children had been entrusted to the SIAA because their safety or development was in danger. Of these, 80.0% remained in an Atikamekw Nehirowisiw community, either in their family home, with extended family, in an Atikamekw Nehirowisiw foster family, or at the Mamo home in La Tuque. On average over the last four years, 77.0% of the children whose situations have come under supervision have remained in an Atikamekw Nehirowisiw setting. Fewer cases have also gone to the court system.

Qarmaapik Family House in Kangiqsualujuaq

Services covered: Health, social services, youth protection

Description

Located in Kangiqsualujuaq, Nunavik, the Qarmaapik Family House is a non-profit organization that helps parents and guardians to better meet their children's needs, strengthen family bonds, and instill traditional Inuit values. It is the result of a collaboration agreement between three partners: Qarmaapik, Ungava Tullatavik Health Centre and the Nunavik Regional Board of Health and Social Services. The organization's goals include preventing the placement of Inuit children with foster families or outside the community, helping families and strengthening the bonds between young people, adults and the community, with the assistance of elders, in a culturally appropriate manner. Qarmaapik also provides a safe place for children from birth to adulthood, as well as for families who want to spend time there. It offers prevention programs, such as community kitchens, gatherings of elders, activities for at-risk youth, summer camps for students, etc. Qarmaapik also has a help line that is available 24/7. A pediatric space is also available.

Impact

Qarmaapik was awarded the prestigious Arctic Inspiration prize, an annual award designed to support innovative community projects in the Canadian Arctic. Thirty-five people were helped between March 2017 and May 2018. According to testimonials from its partners, the existence of Qarmaapik has made it possible to improve services, decrease Medevac evacuations for suicidal ideation, resolve family violence situations more rapidly and in a more adapted way, improve support for crimevictims, etc.

The Identité Uashat project in Uashat mak Mani-Utenam

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

Based on the needs identified by various community actors during the consultation and validation phases, an intervention program was developed between 2016 and 2018 to meet the identity needs of Uashat mak Mani-Utenam youth in placement. The program includes training programs for youth protection workers so that they can support the introduction of interventions that are based on Innu values. Among the initiatives developed are workshops for teenagers, courses on cultural safety for workers and foster families, and "Mon livre de vie, Mon histoire à moi" ("My life book, my story" (Innu version). The goals include involving the extended family in decisions concerning the young person, promoting the youth's contact with his or her culture, reducing placement outside the community, supporting placed teenagers in developing their cultural identity and self-esteem, and supporting the introduction of culturally safe interventions.

Customary care in Ontario

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

In Ontario, customary care consists of the care and supervision of an Indigenous child by someone other than his or her parents, in accordance with band or community traditions. The spirit of this provision of the Child, Youth and Family Services Act is based on the idea that customary care has existed for a very long time, and persists today in numerous Indigenous nations. It is therefore a culturally appropriate placement option for Indigenous children who need protection. A community declaration establishes the placement in formal customary care, and child protection agencies oversee the placement. The person who takes custody of the child is entitled to the same reimbursements, training program and support system as foster families. In all cases, the biological parents continue to maintain significant ties with their child. One feature of this provision is the recognition that Indigenous healing cannot be circumscribed by the timelines prescribed by law. Indigenous children in customary care are not subject to the same deadlines, allowing them to stay in contact with parents who are beginning a recovery process that may last more than 12 or even 24 months.

Impact

Child protection agencies report an increase in the number of Indigenous children and adolescents flagged as requiring protection who are getting a formal customary care placement. This suggests that more children can continue to live in culturally appropriate community environments. In 2013–2014, an average of 1,388 children and adolescents (compared with 1,212 in 2011–2012) had this type of arrangement.

The Indigenous method of alternative dispute resolution in Ontario

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

The alternative dispute resolution method is a strategy used in Ontario to settle disputes regarding youth protection and keep them from going to the court system. In addition to simplifying the legal process and favouring other forms of dispute settlement, the initiative's goal is to foster participation by the family, extended family and community in planning and making decisions pertaining to children, and developing a plan in that regard. Under the regulations, Ontario's youth protection agencies must use one of the following settlement methods: 1) mediation services for the protection of the child; 2) family conferences, or 3) Indigenous approaches (circle led by trained, impartial Indigenous people).

British Columbia: Family Development Response program

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

British Columbia's youth protection policy calls for using a Family Development Response (FDR) program wherever it is possible and safe to do so. FDR calls for short- or long-term interventions and actions that include discussions with families to inform them of community resources and services available to meet their needs. Families are given referrals and sent to services including counselling, parenting skills programs and other assistance measures. The objectives are to focus on the means available to keep children safe within their own family, to take advantage of families' strengths, to support families when youth protection becomes problematic, to avoid placing children in custody outside their families, and to promote traditional learning and healing techniques.

Impacts

"The use of FDRs has increased 20-fold since 2007; at the same time, the number of children in care has decreased by 10%. This decrease is believed to be related to the increased use of safe alternatives such as FDRs. Families taking part in the FDR program have experienced an early return of children to their homes. Of the 21 families that have successfully completed the program and have had their files closed, only one child was later taken into care."

Victoria, B.C.: Kwen'an'latal Intensive Parenting Program

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

Hulitan Family and Community Services in Victoria operates the Kwen'an'latal Intensive Parenting Program (KIP), a three-stage parenting skills development program. The project was designed by members of the local Indigenous community, with the help of focus groups, to provide a program adapted to local cultural needs. It offers parents and children holistic and culturally appropriate support measures. Program objectives are as follows: to promote healing for families, to reinforce or maintain the Indigenous child's cultural identity, to alleviate the intergenerational effects of colonization and residential schools, and to enhance parenting skills.

Impacts

The program has effectively reduced the number of children in care of youth protection services. Over 85.0% of clients met their goals, and the program has a 55.0% return rate of children to their families.

Saskatchewan: Flexible Response Pilot Project

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

While Saskatchewan's Flexible Response Pilot Project serves the entire population, it was developed by the government in collaboration with the First Nations and Métis. By providing culturally appropriate services, the program maintains a primary focus on child safety while promoting permanency for children within the family and community. The project seeks to strengthen the assessment of families' needs and provide more options to families coming into contact with the child welfare system.

Impacts

In the year of the project was launched, 49 fewer children entered the care of Saskatchewan's youth protection services than the previous year. Transfers to ongoing youth protection services were down 50.0%.

Manitoba: Isobel's Place

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

Isobel's Place is an initiative offered by Ma Mawi Wi Chi Itata Centre Inc. (Ma Mawi), an Indigenous human services organization providing child welfare and community-based programs and services to the Indigenous communities in Winnipeg and the surrounding area. Its target clientele is Indigenous teenage mothers between 14 and 17. An 11-bed residential program is available, alongside cultural, education, health, nutrition and parenting programming. The objectives are to permit future mothers to get the help they need to find the options that will empower them to become independent, and support them during their pregnancies and for up to one year following relocation.

Impacts

Although program participants are all wards of the Manitoba child and family services system, it is rare for their children to be taken into care. In fact, in the 2014–2015 fiscal year, only one of the mothers residing at Isobel's place, and only one of the mothers who had moved to independent living had their children taken into care.

Yukon: Cooperative Planning Process

Service covered: Youth protection

Description

Yukon's 2010 Child and Family Services Act (CFSA) and the province's Cooperative Planning Process (CPP) have led to new agreements between the territory and First Nations. These agreements give First Nations enhanced control over child and family services. The CPP mandates First Nations involvement in all aspects of planning and decision-making for their children. In addition to service delivery, the agreement establishes processes for handling systemic issues and resolving differing views. Valuing culture and community in all matters related to children and families is another key feature. The approach focuses on supporting families and extended families in caring for children, and collaborative and inclusive decision-making where extended family, informal support persons, service providers and professionals can come together.

Impacts

In 2013–2014, the number of Indigenous children in the care of youth protection services was down 30% compared to 2007–2008.

Police, justice and correctional services

Poste de police communautaire mixte autochtone (PPCMA) [First Nations community mixed police station] in Val-d'Or

Services covered: Police, health and social services

Description

The ÉMIPIC, an initiative of the la Sûreté du Québec, in Val-d'Or, opened its doors in January 2016. Staffed by police officers and social workers, the station acts as a second-line service provider in situations involving vulnerable, intoxicated, and/or homeless people who present a risk to themselves. Objectives include lowering rates of judicialization, defusing crisis situations and limiting the harm caused by disruptive behaviours.

The SQ announced the creation of PPCMA in November 2016. The organization's mandate is to keep the peace and intervene with Indigenous people in situations of temporary vulnerability, using a community approach. The PPCMA works with vulnerable Indigenous and non-Indigenous individuals who live in downtown Val-d'Or and have been the subject of repeated calls to police, or are in complex situations. The ÉMIPIC team has grown, and it has been incorporated into the PPCMA.

Impacts

According to the SQ, the number of calls for disturbances of the peace, by-law infractions and confused or at-risk individuals fell between 2014 and 2017. The number of violation tickets issued has dropped 81%, and the number of incarcerations is down 43%. As for ÉMIPIC, 62 vulnerable individuals requiring assistance from multiple agencies have received support, including 16 who are still active program members. For the PPCMA's second year, the SQ plans to strengthen the involvement of Indigenous people in committees and working groups, and integrate members of Indigenous police forces on the team.

Montréal: Équipe mobile de référence et d'intervention en itinérance [EMRII mobile referral and intervention team for the homeless]

Services covered: Police, health and social services

Description

EMRII was established by the Service de police de la Ville de Montréal (SPVM) [Montréal police department] in collaboration with the Centre-Sud-de-l'Île-de-Montréal integrated university health and social services centres (CIUSSS). The team currently consists of seven SPVM officers and four CIUSSS outreach workers. EMRII's mission is to conduct outreach by providing second-line services to reach people in situations of homelessness or at-risk individuals who are regularly subject to police interventions and present vulnerability factors. The team performs outreach and provides support accessing a range of services that includes health and social services and legal aid. EMRII takes up, on average, 30 new cases per year. Since the program's creation, it has handled around 200 cases in an intensive manner; 3% involved First Nations individuals, and around 2% were Inuit.

Puvirnituq: Équipe mobile d'intervention (EMI) [mobile intervention team]

Services covered: Police, health and social services

Description

Saqijuq, which means "change in wind direction" in Inuktitut, is an initiative that is currently underway in the Puvirnituq community (Nunavik). The project aims to reduce the use of the justice system by focusing on giving the community greater control through initiatives to rebuild community social regulation mechanisms. One of the main components is a mobile intervention team (MIT) made of police officers and social workers who work together. In the case of conjugal and family violence, the MIT evaluates the needs and issues during interventions in order to refer the individuals involved to appropriate community resources. One unit has already been created with six Kativik regional police force officers and six social workers, and another is planned for 2019. The MIT will begin its work by the end of 2018. After this pilot project, a similar unit may be set up in Kangirsuk, with other Nunavik communities to follow.

Projet Iskwewu, Montréal

Services covered: Police, health and social services

Description

In June 2015, a cooperation agreement was signed between the Service de police de la Ville de Montréal (SPVM) and the RÉSEAU pour la stratégie urbaine de la Community autochtone de Montréal [Network for an urban strategy for Montréal's Indigenous community]. One of the agreement's four objectives was to involve Indigenous groups in developing intervention strategies for missing Indigenous women by developing a protocol, procedures and guidelines. The Iskwewu project (the word means "woman" in Eeyou (Cree)), aims to lower the number and eventually eliminate the phenomenon of missing and murdered Indigenous women in Québec. Launched in May 2017 as an initiative of the Native Women's Shelter of Montréal, the initiative provides emotional support to women, girls, their loved ones and the Indigenous community in dealing with police, to ensure institutions provide appropriate support. Social workers perform outreach and intervention, including acting as a liaison with police services. This project would be the only one in Canada that has grown out of an agreement with a police department. Despite the signature of an agreement with the SPVM, the project has not received SPVM funding. The City of Montréal and Justice Canada have come on board as project funders.

Impacts

Six months after the project began, the cases of 14 missing Indigenous women in Montréal were undertaken by the Iskwewu project. Twelve of these women were found unharmed. Two were dead.

The Hub Model

Services covered: Police, health and social services

Description

The Hub Model involves bringing together multiple organizations and services to deploy prevention and intervention strategies with people considered highly at risk of ending up in the justice system. In the Hub Model, addressing the social problems that are the root causes of criminal behaviour are treated as part of the work of police officers. This includes identifying “classic risk factors” such as alcohol and drug abuse, mental health issues, dropping out of school, histories of family violence and abuse, etc. Interventions are designed to assess and deal with these needs before the situation results in emergency calls and police interventions. The model was first deployed in Glasgow, Scotland. It was brought to Canada by police chief Dale McFee and security consultant Norman Taylor, in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, in 2011. In the Prince Albert model, a biweekly meeting is held with a range of services and organizations (police, social services, health, education, and representatives of Indigenous organizations). During meetings, participants develop a portrait of the situation, and interventions are planned for the next 24 to 48 hours.

Impacts

According to available data, Prince Albert saw a 37% reduction in violent crime between 2010 and 2013. The Hub Model has since been implemented in around 100 Canadian communities, including Indigenous communities.

Police referrals to justice committees

Services covered: Police and justice services

Description

In the Northwest Territories, Nunavut and Greenland, police departments can directly refer certain criminal infractions to Indigenous justice committees, without going through the court prosecutor. Referrals are quickly evaluated by the justice committees, who then decide whether they are equipped to handle the case. If the committee takes a case, the police file is closed, and the committee is responsible for the matter until the case is closed. If the committee chooses not to, the file is sent back to the Crown prosecutor. This process is an example of non-judicialization, meaning the case is handled by the justice committee, which does not then require the involvement of the government justice system.

The “Philadelphia Method”

Services covered: Police

Description

Philadelphia's police chief, in collaboration with the Women's Law Project, has implemented a review process for sexual assault cases. Since its implementation, a group of around ten lawyers and social workers representing various women's and children's rights groups get together and review 400 to 500 cases over a three- to four-day period. Various Canadian police departments, including Ottawa, Kingston, Stratford, Timmins, Peterborough, London and Calgary, have developed similar models. In December 2017, the Sûreté du Québec, inspired by the Philadelphia Model, created a sexual assault review committee that includes members of victims' rights groups. The Service de police de la Ville de Québec [Québec City police department] has done the same. However, unlike the practice in Philadelphia, in Québec victims must request that their file be reviewed.

Impacts

In Philadelphia, the rate of reports of sexual assault was cut from 18% in 1998 to 6% in 2016, and it would appear investigations are being conducted with greater sensitivity. As for the SQ process, media reports suggest few cases have actually been reviewed. As of August 20, 2018, only two complaints would have been reviewed.

The Saqijuq project in Nunavik

Services covered: Police, justice, health, social services, youth protection

Description

Saqijuq, which means "change in wind direction" in Inuktitut is an initiative that is currently underway in the Puvirnituq community (Nunavik). The project is based on the desire to ensure collaborative interventions, create a network of community organizations and services in the judicial sector, moderate alcohol and drug abuse in order to reduce wrongdoing, as well as to reduce the prosecution and incarceration of Inuit, through Inuit social regulation. The project has components focused on health and social services, such as the improvement or creation of support circles, a healing camp on the territory and awareness programs, as well as rehabilitation, disintoxication and sobering services. The creation of a specialized court in Nunavik, also called Nunavik Wellness Court, is also at the heart of the project. A Mobile Intervention Team (MIT) made up of police officers and community workers is also an integral part of Saqijuq. Youth protection services may also refer young people to the project.

The Atikamekw Nehirowisiw Community Justice Program

Service covered: Justice

Description

The Atikamekw Nehirowisiw have begun a project with university researchers to document traditional knowledge and Atikamekw Nehirowisiw concepts of justice. Their goal is to support the development of a care model for conflicts in the fields of youth protection and conjugal and family violence. The project has documented the communities' aspirations for greater autonomy and for strengthening justice structures and processes, in addition to identifying various courses of action.

Kahnawà:ke Justice Department

Service covered: Justice

Description

The Kahnawà:ke Justice Act is a stand-alone piece of legislation covering administrative, criminal, civil and penal jurisdictions to ensure and restore harmony according to the Mohawk people's sovereign right to establish its own laws. It supports four independent bodies, which are the restorative justice program, administrative court, the Court of Kahnawà:ke and the Court of Appeal. The Act makes the restorative justice program the first recourse to resolve conflicts. It implements traditional mediation practices, facilitated discussions and speaking circles in a non-adversarial and holistic approach to social responsibility and harmony. The Court of Kahnawà:ke is made up of two justices of the peace appointed under section 107 of the Indian Act. It hears offences related to said Act, as well as certain offences under the Criminal Code (excluding criminal acts, impaired driving and summary proceedings regarding acts of violence). The administrative court consists of an arbitrator in charge of reviewing decisions by the government's administrative branch. A community arbitration procedure allows private parties to settle their disputes out of court. Lastly, the Kahnawà:ke Justice Commission is responsible for monitoring the administration of justice throughout the territory.

Akwesasne Justice Department

Service covered: Justice

Description

Akwesasne has developed a law ratification process called Law Enactment Procedural Regulation consisting of five phases: law development, acceptance of the principle, community consultation, enactment of the law and its ratification or rejection by the Mohawk Council. The Akwesasne Court Law was ratified in 2016 to recognize and structure both existing and emerging practices. The Akwesasne Court has jurisdiction over the Akwesasne Mohawk territory and applies the laws and regulations enacted by Akwesasne, which may include offences punishable by summary proceedings. Its judges are recognized by the community for their integrity, knowledge and values and they don't have to be attorneys. The roles of prosecutor and defence attorney have been provided for, but there is also the possibility for a "representative" to be present to speak on someone's behalf. Court Law is flexible to give judges the freedom to come up with creative solutions to conflicts. It also provides for a mediation service, specifically for family matters. The Akwesasne Review Commission monitors the administrative bodies and the Court's judicial independence. The Akwesasne Community Justice Program was established with the signing of protocols in 2004. Specifically, the Neh Ka'nikonri:iio Council is made up of members recognized by the community and its goal is to restore community balance and peace among families. Young people and adults are referred there if they demonstrate their willingness to take responsibility for events in which they were involved.

First Peoples Justice Center of Montréal

Services covered: Justice, correctional, health and social services

Description

The First Peoples Justice Center of Montreal (FPJCM), created in 2014, is mandated with working with the Indigenous community in Montréal to end the systemic issues of marginalization, discrimination and victimization of Indigenous Peoples in the justice and correctional system, through culturally adapted supports and services. FPJCM services are divided into three components. For prevention and dejudicialization, programs pertaining to healthy relationships, anger management, drug use and healing are offered, as well as mentorship by elders. Its intervention and diversion programs include legal information, referral, support and guidance, in addition to participation in the court's PAJIC program and the YMCA's Compensatory Work program. For its awareness and capacity building component, the FPJCM relies on information, the plea, cultural safety and Indigenous realities. In addition to consolidating these aspects, in 2018 the FPJCM's aim was to create an alternative measures program at the Palais de Justice, as well as a prison visits program for both federal and provincial prisons.

Impact

As of February 20, 2018, the FPJCM has provided services to 66 people, of which 50% were Inuit and 50% were from First Nations.

Ontario's Aboriginal Legal Services

Services covered: Justice, youth protection

Description

Aboriginal Legal Services (ALS) was created in 1990 to meet the justice needs for Indigenous persons living in Toronto. Today, its activities cover 11 different cities in Ontario. ALS has four primary fields of intervention: the legal clinic, an Indigenous justice program called the Community Council, Gladue Reports and Courtworkers. The legal clinic provides legal information and advice for housing, social assistance and human rights complaints, in addition to being involved in cross-border issues, status recognition and strategic litigation matters to advance the rights of Indigenous peoples before the courts, coroner investigations and commissions of inquiry. ALS' Community Council, which began its activities in 1992, is the first Indigenous justice program in an urban setting in Canada. The program's objectives were established with the elders and traditional teachers, then discussed in community consultations. The cases transferred to the Community Council by the Crown are diverted, meaning that the accusations are dropped or suspended from the beginning and the case does not return to the Crown. All types of infractions can be accepted where the Crown consents, except for sexual and conjugal violence. ALS has workers who spend all their time writing Gladue Reports for Indigenous defendants, or shorter Gladue Letters when the sentence sought is less than 90 days. Gladue Caseworkers also guide the individuals in their proceedings after the reports have been prepared. Gladue courts in Toronto began in 2001 and consist of court rooms reserved to hear Indigenous individuals. Indigenous art is exhibited in the court rooms and a smudging session is held each day before the hearings begin. Specifically, bail hearings may be held there and resources have been set up for housing and support so that defendants may be freed. Gladue Reports are an essential part of the process and sentencing circles take place in the court room. ALS has five criminal law Courtworkers as well as a family worker in Toronto. They refer the defendants to the Community Council or guide the individuals in the Gladue court. Lastly, ALS has a program called Giiwedan anang to help individuals leave the youth protection system. After having met with an elder, discussion circles including a youth protection services decision maker are organized. The parents work on the issues identified with an elder or an ALS mentor and if the child is old enough, they are supported by an "uncle" or "auntie."

Impact

The Community Council takes charge of more than 200 defendants per year. Assessments by the Department of Justice Canada have concluded that the recidivism rate for individuals who complete the program has decreased significantly. ALS evaluates its activities very positively because of the improvement in its clients' living conditions and well-being, in addition to empowering the Indigenous community. As for Gladue courts, the assessments as well as ALS' experience show that people feel they have been heard and have taken ownership of a process that seems more legitimate to them. Giiwedin anang handles 70 cases per year and has a very high success rate.

Montréal's Programme d'accompagnement justice itinérance à la Cour (PAJIC)

Service covered: Justice

Description

Begun in 2009, the Programme d'accompagnement justice itinérance à la Cour (PAJIC) is a voluntary social program at Montréal's municipal court for individuals with criminal records who have been homeless and are taking measures to get off the streets and improve their living conditions. The regular PAJIC program voids all or part of the violation tickets resulting from being homeless. The thrust of the open door component is to prevent incarceration and impose sentences adapted to the person's situation, which sometimes includes dropping the accusations. The Clinique Droits Devant, a community organization, is the entrance door to the program and its workers guide individuals throughout the process. A specific team of prosecutors and judges is assigned to the program. Whenever possible, the prosecutors meet the individuals at Clinique Droits Devant rather than in court and a court room is assigned to the program each week for follow-ups and for finalizing cases. A component adapted for Indigenous persons has been under development with the First Peoples Justice Center since 2017. The Val-d'Or Native Friendship Centre began a similar program entitled Anwatan-PAJIC with the Val-d'Or municipal court in 2018, which is adapted to Indigenous needs and specificities in Val-d'Or.

Impact

At the time of its testimony, Clinique Droits Devant had 1,181 individuals who have participated in the regular PAJIC program, including 696 who finished with a complete or partial cancellation of their legal debt. Almost 11,000 violation tickets were cancelled in conjunction with PAJIC.

Victoria's Indigenous Law Research Unit

Service covered: Justice

Description

The Indigenous Law Research Unit (ILRU) was created within the University of Victoria Faculty of Law in British Columbia. The ILRU works with about 40 Indigenous communities and has published numerous reports regarding the various legal questions raised by the communities. Complete research projects usually take eight to ten months. Upon invitation from the community, the unit offers a two- to three-day workshop to explain its methodology, then an analysis process made up of several phases is planned: identification of the specific research question, case analyses (stories, descriptive narratives, discussions, practices), creation of a research framework and lastly implementation, application and critical assessment. The purpose is to create a resource for future decision-making processes, rather than determining what the law should be.

The Teslin Tlingit Nation's Peacemaker Court in Yukon

Service covered: Justice

Description

Pursuant to the signature in 2011 of the Administration of Justice Agreement between the governments of Canada and Yukon, the Teslin Tlingit Nation's Peacemaker Court was founded. It is based on the "Ha Kus Teyea" (lifestyle) principle, which is the maintaining of customary approaches and respect, love, harmony, honesty, trust and responsibility, and applies Teslin Tlingit law and principles. Fines up to $5,000 or incarceration for up to six months may be imposed, except for environmental offences, which can result in fines of up to $300,000. The court has jurisdiction specifically for matters relating to adoption, marriage, wills, inheritance, hunting, trapping and fishing, zoning, flora and fauna and natural resources, but not for criminal matters. In phase 1, the court provides a mechanism to settle disputes with the parties' consent. It may also conduct trials and hear appeals in phase 2 (this function is pending). However, the Peacemakers may act when a criminal case is entrusted to them under a dejudicializing agreement protocol involving the governments, the police and the Crown.

Manitoba's Hollow Water Healing Circle

Services covered: Police, justice, health and social services

Description

The Hollow Water circle was created in 1983 in response to issues related to conjugal and sexual violence. The healing team deals with accusations directly without police involvement (step 1). The team immediately ensures that the victim is protected (step 2). The victim and their family as well as the aggressor and their family benefit from support teams, but the aggressor is confronted by their team (step 3). They may then decide to be sent to the justice system, but if they decide to commit to the circle, they must then recognize their responsibility and plead guilty in court. Their sentence is then suspended for approximately four months to allow them to participate in the healing circle. During this period, the aggressor's spouse and family are provided the required help (step 4), as are the members of the respective families and the community in general (step 5). The evaluation team meets the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (step 6) and the case may be sent to the judicial system. If not, a "reconciliation contract" is established for the aggressor and is presented during discussion circles where the aggressor and victim are separated (steps 7 and 8). The individuals are brought to recognize the facts and the aggressor admits their responsibility, then they must attend therapeutic support sessions (steps 9 and 10). As the victim gets stronger, the circle widens until the "special meeting" takes place (step 11). The aggressor and the victim are face to face, accompanied by their families and members of the extended community. A "healing contract" containing measures to transform the relationship between the aggressor and the victim or community members is signed by everyone present in the circle. Sentencing circles have been included in the process (steps 11 and 12) to allow everyone to express their recommendations. A purification ceremony symbolically marks the end of the healing process (step 13).

The Kapatakan Gilles Jourdain Residential Centre

Services covered: Justice, health, social services, correctional services

Description

Founded in 2001, the Kapatakan Gilles Jourdain Residential Centre is located near Sept-Îles. It can accommodate 20 Indigenous residents who have been involved in the justice system for twelve-week stays to help with the rehabilitation, healing, empowerment and self-sufficiency of individuals and their reconciliation with their family and community. The centre's purpose is to prevent repeat offending, thus reducing human suffering and helping indigenous inmates regain their dignity. During their stay, reidentification of their identity is emphasized as are Indigenous culture and values. Thirteen psychoeducational modules must be completed by the residents, as well as certain programs adapted to their specific needs. A life plan is developed with the liaison officer. In addition to being based on contemporary clinical approaches, the program is founded on the philosophy of Indigenous healing. Among the eligibility criteria for admission, the individuals must be or have been incarcerated and sentenced, thus falling under the Correctional Service of Québec or Canada, and must volunteer for the program. The program is financed almost entirely by contributions from the Ministère de la Sécurité publique and from the Correctional Service of Canada. The centre would also like to welcome individuals in pre-trial detention as part of their bail conditions. A place is reserved for homeless clientele from Uashat mak Mani-Utenam. The centre also plans to participate in the Québec court-supervised drug treatment program (PTTCQ).

Greenland's judicial system

Services covered: Justice and correctional services

Description

Greenland has integrated a form of judicial pluralism into its judicial system. In the 1940s, a judicial expedition travelled to the villages to document the Inuit communities' knowledge and traditions, since 88% of Greenland's inhabitants at that time were Inuit. The Penal Code, enacted in 1954, was then divided into two sections, one containing the criminal infractions and the other containing the sanctions. Except for murder, the infractions are not linked to specific sanctions, to allow the greatest flexibility possible. The magistrate's court is held in the villages with one judge and two assessors. None of them are attorneys and are all individuals recognized by the community. They receive training and the assessors may eventually become judges. There are no attorneys present during hearings, the prosecution being ensured by police officers who have received appropriate training and that of the defence by bystanders who help and guide defendants. The Court of Greenland has specific jurisdiction in certain matters and can hear cases sent by the court of magistrates, in addition to supervising and training local magistrates. Lastly, the High Court of Greenland hears appeals. For a long time, Greenland had no prison, only a mixed establishment where the individuals could come and go freely. They had to pay for their lodging and therefore had to work close by. Inmates who were deemed dangerous were sent to Denmark. In 1994, a Commission for the administration of justice was formed. The Commission visited Québec's Itinerant Court and chose not to introduce that model in Greenland. A prison recently opened its doors in the capital, Nuuk.

Indigenous Courts across Canada

Service covered: Justice services

Description

In Nova Scotia, a court will soon open in the Wagmatcook community in Cape Breton to serve both the Indigenous and non-Indigenous populations, since the local court was closed. Some court days will be dedicated to addiction and well-being programs, and the Mi'kmaw Legal Support Network will be involved. In New Brunswick, the Elsipogtog Healing to Wellness Court in the Elsipogtog Mi'gmaq community coaches individuals in their challenges, specifically when dealing with violence and addiction problems in order to come up with alternatives to incarceration. Ontario has thirteen different Indigenous court models, including those that Aboriginal Legal Services helped to implement, as well as two courts specialized in youth protection in Brantford and Toronto. Saskatchewan's Eeyou (Cree) circuit court travels to the communities. The judge is Eeyou (Cree) and the proceedings take place in the Cree language. Two Indigenous courts exist in Alberta. The first is located in the Siksika community, where a judge speaks Siksika Blackfoot and most of the proceedings take place in that language. The second was located in the Tsuu T'ina community, but was recently moved to a new room in Calgary that is specially adapted for Indigenous peoples. In British Columbia, there are five Indigenous courts, most of which are in small towns near the communities. In some courts, elders sit with the judge during sentencing hearings. Several of these courts can send cases to restorative justice programs. There are no Indigenous courts of this type in Newfoundland and Labrador, Prince Edward Island, Québec or Manitoba.

ORDER CONCERNING THE EXTENSION OF THE MANDATE OF COMMISSION D'ENQUÊTE SUR LES
RELATIONS ENTRE LES AUTOCHTONES ET CERTAINS
SERVICES PUBLICS : ÉCOUTE, RÉCONCILIATION ET PROGRÈS (FRENCH ONLY)

7 FÉVRIER 2018

DÉCRET

GOUVERNEMENT DU QUÉBEC

NUMÉRO 83-2018

CONCERNANT la prolongation du mandat de la Commission d'enquête sur les relations entre les Autochtones et certains services publics au Québec : écoute, réconciliation et progrès

-----oooo0oooo-----

ATTENDU QUE, par le décret n° 1095-2016 du 21 décembre 2016, le gouvernement a constitué la Commission d'enquête sur les relations entre les Autochtones et certains services publics au Québec : écoute, réconciliation et progrès, conformément à l'article 1 de la Loi sur les commissions d'enquête (chapitre C-37);

ATTENDU QUE, conformément à ce décret, la Commission est tenue d'exécuter ses travaux et de soumettre au gouvernement son rapport, comprenant ses constatations, conclusions et recommandations, au plus tard le 30 novembre 2018;

ATTENDU QUE, le 25 janvier 2018, la Commission a demandé un délai additionnel de dix mois pour lui permettre de compléter ses travaux et soumettre son rapport;

ATTENDU QUE la Commission a été confrontée, dès sa constitution, à d'importants défis organisationnels liés notamment au fait de mener ses travaux en région éloignée;

ATTENDU QUE le nombre de dossiers actuellement sous étude et le besoin de poursuivre les rencontres dans certaines communautés et différentes régions du Québec amènent la Commission à la conclusion qu'il lui sera impossible de remplir son mandat à l'intérieur du délai prévu;

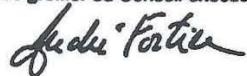

83 - 2018

IL EST ORDONNÉ, en conséquence, sur la recommandation de la ministre de la Justice et du ministre responsable des Affaires autochtones:

QUE le mandat de la Commission d'enquête sur les relations entre les Autochtones et certains services publics au Québec : écoute, réconciliation et progrès soit prolongé jusqu'au 30 septembre 2019;

QUE le décret n° 1095-2016 du 21 décembre 2016 soit modifié en conséquence.

Le greffier du Conseil exécutif

APPENDIX 12

METHODOLOGICAL LIMITATIONS OF THE INDIAN REGISTER, THE REGISTER OF CREE AND NASKAPI BENEFICIARIES AND THE REGISTER OF INUIT BENEFICIARIES

Indian Register

The Indian Register is managed by Crown-Indigenous Relations and Northern Affairs Canada (CIRNAC)¹⁵. It contains sociodemographic data on Indigenous peoples subject to Canada's Indian Act¹⁶. However, it has several limitations, methodologically speaking.

First of all, only those who have submitted a registration request and whose rights have been recognized appear in the Register, rather than all those who are entitled to be registered under the Indian Act. In other words, it is not an exhaustive population statement of Canada's First Nations¹⁷.

Second of all, CIRNAC does not update the Register on a regular basis. As a result, if no event (birth, death, change of address, etc.) is reported by registered individuals or their families, the information remains unchanged and can eventually become obsolete or incomplete¹⁸. CIRNAC has already established that the majority of parents do not declare their child upon its birth, but rather a few years later, which implies that the Register's population statistics are incomplete. Along the same lines, the high number of individuals in the Register (2,386) between the ages of 100 and 151 suggests that it contains a significant number of deceased persons. Failure to update the Register also means that the actual place of residence often differs from the address recorded. This shortcoming makes it difficult, if not impossible, to accurately map First Nations' residential areas in Canada.

Third, while the Register usually contains the full name, band number, date of birth and home community of those registered, part of this information (name and birth date) is missing for 1,441 of these individuals.

Lastly, regarding the province of Québec, because of the unique geographic location of the Akwesasne community, straddling the Canada-US border and the Québec-Ontario border, it is impossible to paint a comprehensive portrait of Indigenous peoples living in the province.

Register of Cree and Naskapi Beneficiaries

The Register of Cree and Naskapi Beneficiaries has listed members of the Eeyou (Cree) nation since 1975 and members of the Naskapi nation since 1978. It is managed by the Ministère de la Santé et des Services sociaux (MSSS) and allows the Eeyou (Cree) and Naskapis to take advantage of certain rights under the James Bay and Northern Québec Agreement and the Northeastern Québec Agreement¹⁹.

Contrary to the Indian Register, the Register of Cree and Naskapi Beneficiaries is updated on a regular basis. According to the Act respecting Cree, Inuit and Naskapi Native persons,²⁰ the Secretary General must modify the Register and record the beneficiaries. A local registry officer is then responsible for maintaining the community list and notifying the Secretary General of all changes requiring modifications in the Register. The MSSS therefore keeps the Register up to date on behalf of the Secretary General, based on modifications submitted by local registry officers.

Local registry officers are responsible for informing the MSSS about deceased persons. However, since April 2015, the MSSS and the Registrar of Civil Status have been collaborating to simplify processing efforts for births and deaths.

It is possible for an individual to be registered in both the Indian Register and the Register of Cree and Naskapi Beneficiaries. This is why anyone who belongs to an Eeyou (Cree) or Naskapi community has been withdrawn from the Indian Register for the purposes of our assessment in order to avoid duplications. There is a smaller margin of error since the Register of Cree and Naskapi Beneficiaries is managed on a regular basis.

Register of Inuit Beneficiaries

The Inuit have had their own register since April 1, 2006. It is managed by the Makivik Corporation²¹ and updated daily to record each birth and death. The Register may also be modified when an Inuk enrolls under another land claim, either under the James Bay and Northern Québec Agreement (JBNQA) or as an Inuk beneficiary under the Nunavut Land Claims Agreement. Regarding the management of deceased Inuit beneficiaries, archivists at the Kuujjuarapik hospital send the death certificate to the person in charge of the Register, who then remove the beneficiary's name. However, if a death occurs outside of Nunavik, it sometimes takes up to one year before the registration office receives the death certificate. The family is sometimes also required to send the death certificate to the Makivik Corporation.

The Inuit Beneficiaries Register records the data of 14 Northern villages along Hudson Bay and Ungava Bay, including Puvirnituq, which has no landholding corporation. It has two lists: one list of Inuit beneficiaries from Nunavik and one list of Inuit beneficiaries who have lived outside of the territory for ten or more consecutive years.

41 The CISSS name was not used because the agreement in effect were signed prior to the amalgamation of the provincial network establishments.

42 The responsibilities allowed under section 32 YPA may differ from one Indigenous organization to another. For example, the community may receive reports, decide on the child's direction, review the situation, and exercise guardianship or receive consents for adoption. Other communities, such as Kitigan Zibi, assess the child's situation but do not hold other responsibilities authorized by the DYP under section 32 YPA.

43 Although delegated responsibilities were possible in the bipartite agreement in effect, at the time of writing the report the Waban-Aki Grand Council and the communities of Wendake and Essipit did not employ staff to exercise them.

44 The community of Akwesasne is divided between two Canadian provinces (Québec and Ontario) and the State of New York in the United States.
